

Editor's Note

Retaining the quest for multidisciplinary research among the staff members is the prime objective of 'Andrean Research Journal'. Keeping in mind the objective of inculcating the tradition of research among the staff members and readers of ARJ this year also we have brought a diverse range of multi disciplinary research papers.

While entire world is facing challenges of the COVID 19 pandemic and becoming used to for new normal lifestyle, the present issue emphasizes and discusses some of the significant areas that are affected due to pandemic. Online education at all levels was the major concern of the government after health care management. The first article of this issue 'Perception of Online Lecture Recordings: A Case Study with Undergraduate Commerce Students in the Course of Mathematics & Statistics' written by Prashant Tari provides a comparative analysis of online lectures recordings perceived by the different groups of undergraduate Mathematics & Statistics students. The study reported that online recording proved as additional help for all the students. 'Impact of Thumbnails on YouTube amongst Teenagers in Mumbai' studied by Ninoshka D'silva reported that multitudinal objects, brighter colors, and single color thumbnails help to capture attention of users at a glance. Further, Janine Coelho discussed 'A Brief History of Vaccines in India' tracing the vaccine movement in India from the late 19th and early 20th century. A study suggested that government should consider COVID 19 pandemic as an opportunity to enhance public health infrastructure. Artificial Intelligence a Threat or a Blessing? Studied by Rachel Shinde, tracing advantage and implications of Artificial Intelligence in day to day life.

Investments Opportunities under Section 80C of the Income Tax Act written by Kevin Miranda, elaborated investments have done under section 80C will beneficial for the retirement planning and for the unforeseen situations in life with reference to COVID 19. Hannah Ambrose discussed state-wise analysis of microfinance in India and reported the impact of COVID 19 pandemic on the microfinance institutions of India. Further, Priya Shahi presented some new results for Perov type F-contractions of Hardy-Rogers-type for self-mapping on spaces equipped with vector-valued metrics. The Relationship between Adult Attachment Styles, Coping Behaviours, Affective States and the Covid-19